Happy hosts Saloni Mirchandani Malkani and hubby Sameer Malkani of the FBAI were there to warmly welcome the select guests like Nisha Jamwal, Akhil Shahani of the Shahani Trust, Keshav Prakash of Vault Spirits and Rajesh Israni of Aspri Spirits. They saw that London Taxi draws inspiration from the exuberance of London city. Michelin star chef Nagraj Bhat and his team were in attendance to offer you some progressive global cuisine. At the bar was creative genius and flair bartender Ami Shroff. Guests soaked in the creative space that gave them a total London tube station vibe and every set of chairs inspired from different parts of London city. London Taxi is owned by Sanjay Shetty, Vivek Das Chaudhari and Ricky Singh with partner Dhaval Udeshi who has been a long-time member of the hospitality sector.

The inside story

THE world's most-recognized innerwear brand Jockey launched a unique pop-up museum at High Street Phoenix to bring alive its legacy. Walking down memory lane of the Jockey museum was Kriti Sanon, Kriti Kharbanda and Rhea Chakraborty. The lovely ladies were seen gushing at the history of innerwear pioneered by Jockey over the past century. They learnt of the invention of the brief in 1934, revolutionary Y-front design of 1935, 'Cellophane Wedding' in 1938 which was the world's first innerwear fashion show, the first innerwear TV commercial in 1958, the special line of underwear created for NASA's Apollo mission in 1962, introduction of the first men's bikini brief in 1969, pioneering the use of box packaging for innerwear in 1972, the first-ever innerwear fashion show in India in 1995 and many more. This year also marks 70 years since Jockey stitched the brand name on the waist band of their innerwear.
